Song and music have always played an important role in Jewish culture. Indeed, the Bible itself enumerates the various musical instruments used during Temple days as well as the songs sung by the Levites during the services. The earliest reference to music is found in the Book of Genesis (IV, 21) where Juhel is mentioned as the world's first musician. Early Biblical music, however, was primarily of a religious nature, used mostly in prayer and during religious holidays.

After the destruction of the Second Temple, synagogues called Nikudim became the centers of Jewish musical activity in these small houses of worship, and the services were conducted by a representative of the congregation, She abbiamo Tehillim. The first cantors were known as Peytanim (poets) and they not only sang the melodies but also composed the tunes and poems as well. The Peytan took the place of the Levites who performed the Tevillah (service) in the Temple. These cantors inspired the people with beautiful cantorial melodies of the written prayers and helped to maintain a continuous interest in Jewish song and music. Unfortunately, the early cantor was not professionally trained in the art of musical notation, thus many of the cantorial compositions were forever lost. The ancient melodies that remain today have been passed on from father to son generation to generation, and are accepted as the pillars of the synagogue liturgy.

With the advent of the Siddur, many new melodies were introduced to the Jewish people. Compositions called "Zmirot" were chanted at the Sabbath table and on other religious occasions, adding beauty and spiritual uplift to the Jewish home.

The year 1734 marked the founding of the Chasidic movement by Rabbi Israel Baal Shem Tov. This was most significant to Jewish musical history. Chassidism stressed the emotional rather than the rational aspects of religion. Their belief that certain emanations (religous beliefs) are better expressed by song or dance, provided the way for the Hassidic and a more spiritual inspiration and elevation. Early Chassidic leaders constantly encouraged their followers to create new melodies in honor of various religious occasions, thus enhancing their observance.

Cantorial music as it is known today first took root in Eastern Europe at the start of the 19th century. Eager students flocked about the early masters, and a number of cantorial schools soon developed. Each school was noted for its individual style. Musical notation was still uncommon in cantorial circles, forcing the young cantors to memorize hundreds of intricate compositions. This sometimes resulted in a temporary lapse of memory, which tested the cantor's skill in improvisation.

The continuous appearance of new melodies and compositions eventually helped the formal acceptance of musical notation by the cantors. Unfortunately, this led to a more fixed rather than flexible service. It was not at all unusual for a cantor to attend a professional school of music, while continuing with his cantorial lessons. Larger cities engaged full-time cantors who organized choirs to enhance the services. Smaller towns favored congregational singing without cantorial embellishments, blending their singing with that of the Tzidkoth.

The twentieth century brought unrest and persecution to the Jews of Eastern Europe. Countless restrictions were placed on the Jewish community by the European governments and the Jew was the first to be deprived of his religious freedom. This unfortunate situation encouraged many Jews to leave Eastern Europe and settle in America. Little did those immigrants realize how truly fortunate they were. Those Jews who remained in Europe were later slaughtered in the greatest holocaust that ever befell the Jewish people. Among the early immigrants that came to the Western world, were cantors with voices whose equal are seldom heard today. This marked the start of a new Jewish era known as the "Golden Age of Cantors."

This great era was not destined to endure long. With the death of the twentieth century cantors, people were deprived of an art priceless to Jewish culture and music. Few cantors recorded their music. Today these recordings are collectors' items and the original discs are extremely rare.

Many of the performances appearing in this series were among the first discs to be recorded on phonograph records.

Appearing is a collection of the most famous masterpieces of the great cantors. These recordings were expressly engineered to recapture for the listener the flavor of actual concerts by the artists as they performed many years ago.

The latest technical advances have been employed to best represent the original voices in both range and quality of sound. Special engineering skills were used to make it possible for the Greater Recording Co., Inc. to offer you a recording of superior quality and the highest attainable standards.

OTHER NEW RELEASES

- Jo Amar Sings Most Popular Songs of the Israeli Hit Parade (vol. 2) GRC158
- Yosef Rosenblatt Cantorial Masterpieces (vol. 9) GRC156
- Moishe Oysher At His Best GRC154
- Cantor Zavel Kwartin Sings His Original Compositions (vol. 2) GRC152
- The Art of Cantor Gershon Sirota (vol. 2) GRC150
- Cantor Moshe Koussovitzky Sings His Most Famous Synagogue Masterpieces (vol. 2) GRC148
- The Best Cantorial Works of Cantor Pierre Pinchik GRC146
- Cantor Yosef Rosenblatt Sings His Most Famous Cantorial Compositions (vol. 8) GRC144
- Cantor Yosef Rosenblatt Sings Yiddish Folk Songs (vol. 7) GRC142
- Cantor Moshe Koussovitzky Sings His Most Famous Synagogue Masterpieces (vol. 1) GRC140
- Cantor Zavel Kwartin Sings His Best Cantorial Works (vol. 1) GRC138
- Jo Amar Sings Chassidic Niggunim & Hebrew Concert Hits GRC136
- The Epstein Bros. Orchestra Present 20 Chassidic Melodies GRC134
- Have Natasha - Chassidic Sing Along - With Cantor Aaron Lieber and his Sons GRC132
- The Minzer-Cord Orchestra and Singers play the Niggunim of Jack Spivak GRC130
- Original Chassidic Niggunim Sung by Eli Lipsker and his Children's Choir with Orchestral accompaniment GRC128
- The Niggun Singers feature the Hebrew version of "Those Were the Days & Other Concert Hits GRC126
- Cantor Elihu Treistung - From My Heart To Jerusalem GRC124
- Chassidic Masterpieces GRC122
- Cantor Yosef Rosenblatt sings his Original Chassidic Niggunim GRC120
- Cantor Moshe Taube sings Synagogue Masterpieces GRC116
- Cantor Carlebach in Live Concert *I Heard The Wall Singing (vol. 2) GRC114
- Shlomo Carlebach in Live Concert *I Heard The Wall Singing (vol. 1) GRC112
- Eli Lipsker and The Yeshiva Orchestra In Concert GRC110
- Meir Levy sings Israel's Most Joyous Songs GRC108
- Meir Levy Sings "Jerusalem of Gold" and other Song Hits GRC104
- Cantor Berekah Chasy in the Synagogue

Complete Catalog Write: GREATER RECORDING CO., INC., 164 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.