A Concert With Yossele Rosenblatt
Volume 11
"MASTERWORKS OF THE GREAT CANTORS SERIES"

Song and music have always played an important role in Jewish culture. Indeed, the Bible itself enumerates the various musical instruments used during Temple days as well as the songs sung by the Levites during the services. The earliest reference to music is found in the Book of Genesis (IV,21) where Jubal is mentioned as the world's first musician. Early Biblical music, however, was primarily of a religious nature, used mostly in prayer and during religious holidays. After the destruction of the Second Temple, synagogues called Midrashim became the centers of Jewish worship. In these small houses of worship, the services were conducted by a representative of the congregation, a leader known as the Torah. These cantors were known as Paytanim (poets) and they not only sang the melodies but also composed the tunes and poems as well. The Paytan took the place of the Levites who performed the Avodah (service) in the Temple. These cantors inspired the people with beautiful liturgical melodies of the written prayers and helped to maintain a continuous interest in Jewish song and music. Unfortunately, the early cantor was not professionally trained in the art of music, thus many fine musical compositions were forever lost. The ancient melodies that remain today have been passed on from father to son, from generation to generation, and are accepted as a part of the synagogue liturgy.

With the advent of the Siddur, new melodies were introduced to the Jewish people. Compositions called "Zimroth" were chanted at the Sabbath table and on other religious occasions, adding beauty and spiritual uplift to the Jewish home. The year 1734 marked the founding of the Chasidic movement by Rabbi Israel Baal Shem Tov. This was most significant to Jewish musical history. Chassidism stressed the emotional rather than the rational aspects of religion. Their belief that certain emanations (religious beliefs) are better expressed by song or dance, paved the way for new compositions of spiritual inspiration and elevation. Early Chasidic leaders constantly encouraged their followers to create new melodies in honor of various religious occasions, thus enhancing their observance.

Cantorial music as it is known today first took root in Eastern Europe at the start of the 19th century. Eager students flocked to the early masters, and a number of cantorial schools soon sprang up. The cantors were not just musicians; they were also scholars. The cantorial school was notable for its individual style. Musically, the cantorial style was uncommon in cantorial circles, forcing the young cantors to memorize hundreds of intricate compositions. This sometimes resulted in a temporary lapse of memory, which tested the cantor's skill in improvisation.

The continuous appearance of new melodies and compositions eventually helped the formation of musical notation by the cantors. Unfortunately, this led to a more fixed rather than flexible service. It was not at all unusual for a cantor to attend a professional school of music, while maintaining his cantorial lessons. Larger cities engaged full time cantors who organized choirs to enhance the services. Smaller towns favored congregational singing without cantorial embellishments, blending their singing with that of the Baal Shem Tov.

The twentieth century brought unrest and persecution to the Jews of Eastern Europe. Countless restrictions were placed on the Jewish community by the European governments and the Jew was the first to be deprived of his religious freedom. This unfortunate situation encouraged many Jews to leave Eastern Europe and settle in America. Little did those immigrants realize how truly fortunate they were. Those Jews who remained in Europe were later slaughtered in the greater holocaust that ever befell the Jewish people. Among the early immigrants that came to the Western world, were cantors with voices whose equal are seldom heard today. This marked the start of a new Jewish era known as the "Golden Age of Cantors."

This great era was not destined to endure for long. With the death of the twentieth century cantors, people deprived of an art priceless to Jewish culture and music. Few cantors recorded their music. Today these recordings are collectors' items and the original discs are extremely rare.

Many of the performances appearing in this series were among the first discs to be recorded on phonograph records.

Appearing is a collection of the most famous masterpieces of the great cantors. These recordings were expressly engineered to capture for the listener the full flavor of actual concerts by the artists as they performed many years ago.

The latest technical advances have been employed to best represent the original voices in both range and quality of sound. Special engineering skills were used to make it possible for the Greater Recording Co., Inc. to offer you a recording of superior quality and the highest attainable standards.

---

OTHER NEW RELEASES

- Jo Amar Sings Most Popular Songs of the Israeli Hit Parade [vol. 2] GRC158
- Yosele Rosenblatt Cantorial Masterpieces [vol. 9] GRC156
- Moishe Oyster At His Best [vol. 7] GRC154
- Cantor Zawel Kwartler Sings His Original Compositions [vol. 2] GRC152
- The Art of Cantor Gershon Sirota [vol. 2] GRC150
- Cantor Moše Kousnovsky Sings His Most Famous Synagogue Masterpieces [vol. 8] GRC144
- The Best Cantorial Works of Cantor Pierre Pinchick [vol. 1] GRC140
- Cantor Yosele Rosenblatt Sings His Most Famous Cantorial Compositions [vol. 7] GRC142
- Cantor Yosele Rosenblatt Sings Yiddish Folk Songs [vol. 1] GRC138
- Cantor Zawel Kwartler Sings His Best Cantorial Works [vol. 3] GRC136
- Jo Amar Sings Chassidic Nigunim & Hebrew Concert Hits GRC134
- The Epstein Bros. Orchestral Present 20 Chassidic Melodies GRC132
- I Have Neshira - Chassidic Sing Along - With Cantor Aaron Lieber and his Sons GRC130
- The Menorah Orchemists and Singers play the Original Chassidic Nigunim Sung by Eli Lipsker and his Children's Choir with Orchestral accompaniment GRC128
- The Noam Singers feature the Hebrew version of "Those Were The Days" and other Concert Hits GRC126
- Cantor Eliehu Teitshman - From My Heart To Jerusalem Cantorial Masterpieces GRC124
- Cantor Yosele Rosenblatt sings his Original Chassidic Nigunim GRC122
- Cantor Yosele Rosenblatt in the Land of Israel GRC120
- Cantor Moše Taube Sings Synagogue Masterpieces GRC116
- Shlomo Carlebach in Live Concert "I Heard The Wall Singing" [vol. 2] GRC114
- Shlomo Carlebach in Live Concert "I Heard The Wall Singing" [vol. 1] GRC112
- Eli Lipsker and The Yeshiva Orchesta In Concert GRC110
- Men Levy Sings Israel's Most Joyous Songs GRC108
- Men Levy Sings "Jerusalem of Gold" and other Song Hits GRC106
- Masterworks of the Great Cantors GRC104

---

Complete Catalog Write: GREATER RECORDING CO., INC., 104 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

© Copyright 1959 by GREATER RECORDING CO., INC. All rights reserved
RARE CANTORIAL MUSIC
A CONCERT WITH
YOSSELE ROSENBLATT
VOLUME 11

1. ZAROH CHAYO
2. ROZHINKES MIT MANDLIN
3. DER TALIS’L
4. MAYN HAILIG LAND
5. MELECH ELYON
6. SHIR HAMAALOS

© Copyright 1970 by
Greater Recording Co., Inc.
All Rights Reserved
RARE CANTORIAL MUSIC

A CONCERT WITH
YOSSELE ROSENBLATT

VOLUME 11

SIDE 2
33 1/3 RPM

1. KOL NIDRE
2. KEILI KEILI
3. MI SHEBERACH
4. ELEGIE
5. MELECH RACHAMON
6. V’KOREV P’ZURENU

© Copyright 1970 by Greater Recording Co., Inc.
All Rights Reserved